

The following data are case studies of 70 active shooter events which occurred between 1999-2016. Criteria determination was that the incident took place inside or on the immediate premises of a faith-based facility and at least one person was injured or killed.

The Department of Homeland Security and the FBI believe faith-based organizations will be the next big targets. Though we understand churches have been targeted for some time, it was not until the shooting in Charleston, NC in 2015, that an incident met the minimum victim requirement for the FBI to consider it an Active Shooter event. Regardless of the size of your facility, steps should be taken to protect your congregation and the sanctity of your place of worship. Let us help you.
